HAVE A STYLISH CHRISTMAS

Pictures: Steve Benbow, Warner Bros, Rex Features

Interior designer Linda Barker will be spending Christmas in her beloved East Riding of Yorkshire, where she has a second home in a quiet village, near where her sister lives. And understated is a word that definitely will not apply. 'I think you have to go over the top at Christmas,' she says. 'You need rich colours, reds and plums, and lots of lights, whole curtains of fairy lights, and scented candles. Fresh flowers as well, like amaryllis. Think Cabaret. Think Moulin Rouge.'

Her childhood was more Last of the Summer Wine. She grew up in Yorkshire, one of five children, and Christmases were always deeply traditional with 'lots of really cold walks'.

And even now she manages to combine that old-fashioned Yorkshire virtue of thrift with her love of show and extravagance. For those who cannot afford lots of scented candles, or amaryllis, she has useful tips on how to cut costs, some of which she shares in UK Style's three-part series Planet Christmas.

'I like a vaguely oriental feel at Christmas,' she says. 'And origami paper is really inexpensive. It's easy to fold into little fans, then you can join them together to make garlands. Or take some little twiggly branches and dip them into white paint, so that they look a bit like coral. I know flowers are expensive but you can easily pad them out with white twiggly bits, or greenery from the garden.'

After the journey north from London, it will take Barker a day to decorate her Yorkshire home for Christmas. Her daughter, Jessica, clearly a chip off the old block, takes a full and active role and contributes plenty of ideas of her own.

But, at 10, Jessica no longer believes. 'I think she stopped believing in Father Christmas when she was seven,' Barker says. 'There's always someone at school ready to give the game away, and she came home one day and said, "I think there's something we should talk about."'

Still, it sounds as though there'll be no shortage of magic in the Barker household, even without the notion of Rudolf parking on the roof. 'I believe that every meal should be a proper sit-down job, even breakfast,' she says. 'And I like to sprinkle stuff on the table, perhaps little shells or sparkly bits, and put the glasses in the freezer so they're frosted.'

'Sometimes you can do things that don't cost any money at all. For instance, I'd advise people to alter the scale of things. Don't just hang bog-standard baubles on the tree, hang really tiny ones and really big ones. It looks great. Or use unusual things, like junk jewellery. Clip-on earrings work well, believe it or not.'

The fabulous Baker girl

Cheryl Baker, presenter of The Travel Bug, has always enjoyed travelling, even when the destination was no more exotic than Leysdown on the Isle of Sheppey – in fact, especially then.

The fourth of five children from Bethnal Green in London's East End, whose father worked in a factory making shoes, Baker's annual summer holiday throughout her childhood was to a holiday camp in Leysdown.

'The toilet block was in the middle of a field, so we had a potty underneath the bed, no electricity ... and I absolutely loved it,' she says. 'Driving over the bridge on the coach, and seeing all the coloured roofs of the chalets ... the excitement of it was incredible.'

Baker's first trip abroad was in 1968, when she was 14. 'We went on a school skiing trip to Axams, near Innsbruck, and travelled through the night on a train. Again, the excitement of it ... seeing snow and little twinkly lights, and houses decorated on the outside, it was so different from anything I'd ever seen. In fact, I remember that it was my first experience of double-glazing, and duvets. I saw this duvet on my bed, and thought I was going to freeze without blankets.'

She remembers, too, her first trip abroad on an aeroplane. 'I was 19, and my aunt asked if I wanted to go to Magaluf in Majorca with her and my cousin. It was amazing. I couldn't believe we'd landed on a Spanish island.'

Baker is somewhat more sophisticated now, having travelled widely when her group Buck's Fizz hit the big time. 'We were number one with Buck's Fizz, travelling along the Gold Coast of Australia, and I remember thinking, "This is a real good time in my life,"' she says. Since then she has had children – twins Kyla and Natalie – but motherhood has not cramped her style.

'One of the best trips I've ever done was to Lapland to see Father Christmas, when the children were four,' she says. 'It was 26 below zero, we wore thermals underneath our ordinary clothes, and ski-wear on top, and still it was bitterly cold, but the whole thing was magical, the sort of trip you can't repeat because it just wouldn't be the same.' Besides, Kyla and Natalie, who are now eight, might be a bit more sceptical about the bearded guy in the grotto.

Friendship never ends?

At the time of writing, it has not been determined whether next month's ninth series of Friends will be the last. Stars Jennifer Aniston (Rachel) and David Schwimmer (Ross) are said to be keen to pursue individual projects, although Lisa Kudrow (Phoebe) has been reported in the magazine Variety as saying that she wants to carry on. And why wouldn't she? The six lead characters are each paid a whopping $1m per episode.

If past trends continue, the NBC network will throw even more money at the six Friends to stay on for a 10th series. Indeed, comedian Conan O'Brien once quipped that there was always a chance the Friends cast would come back for one more season, 'if we give them the country of France'. To NBC, the show is about as valuable as the gross national product of, if not France, perhaps a small African country. It is more successful than ever, topping the make-or-break US ratings for the first time in its eight-year history during the last series, with regular viewing figures of more than 24 million.

Apparently, the seventh series of Friends was considered shaky, with ratings down slightly and some critics speaking unkindly of the scripts.

But standards improved and ratings rocketed. As for the ninth series, NBC president Jeff Zucker has said: 'It probably is the final season ... and I would be surprised if it weren't. But I wouldn't 100 per cent put the nails in the coffin yet.'

COMING SOON

Blood ties

The end of the year is nigh, but new seasons of Buffy and Angel are just around the corner. Jenny Eden brings you a sneak preview

SARAH MICHELLE GELLAR MAY be thinking of hanging up her vampire slaying stake for good, but there's no let-up in kicking demon asses in the new series of Buffy the Vampire Slayer.

The seventh, and possibly last series (starting on Sky One next month), sees Buffy go back to basics and back to school with Sunnydale rebuilt. But when Buffy goes to take a look at her old stamping ground on her sister Dawn's first day back, she discovers the evil spirits haunting the classrooms are far from dead and buried.

Offered the job of Sunnydale's school counsellor, there are plenty of troubled teenagers, both alive and dead, for her to deal with.

Series creator Joss Whedon reveals: 'We're going to see Buffy empowered again instead of at the mercy of life. It's about getting back to the mission statement of the show: here's a little girl with a lot of power and a lot of people who underestimate it.'

On the other side of the world, in England, Willow is getting a lesson from Giles on how to control her powers after her grief-stricken rampage, which almost ended the world. But how will she be accepted by her old pals after trying to kill them? And even when she returns to the US, it's not the last we see of Giles this series.

Anthony Head, who plays the ever-wise Giles, admits: 'I'm back as a recurring character, which means I get the best of both worlds.'

And Spike returns from Africa to discover life isn't easy with a soul – especially when his beloved Buffy isn't forgiving him for attacking her.

James Marsters, who plays the bleached blond-haired romantic, says: 'He wants to get Buffy and it's as simple as that for Spike – it's big love. Spike is evil but he'd do anything for her, no matter how hard it is for him. If a girl doesn't like your tennis shoes you don't wear them the next day, it's the same sort of thing.'

Meanwhile Angel escapes from his deep-sea casket, but continues to be plagued by the teenage-son-from-hell, Connor.

In real life, star David Boreanaz must be hoping his own son, born this year, doesn't grow up to be anything like his screen offspring.

He says: 'Angel wants his son to be different from him so there's a lot of conflict, a lot of anger.'

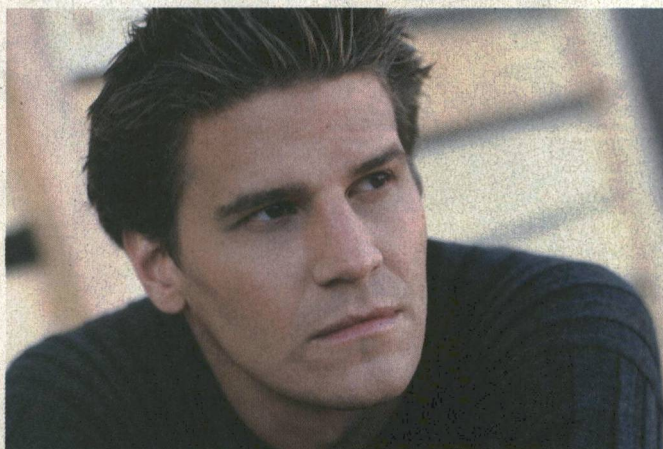

At the end of the last series Angel and Cordelia were about to confess their love for each other when Connor's treachery helped tear them apart and she disappeared, ascending beyond the mortal plane thanks to her new demon powers.

'We're going to see Buffy empowered instead of at the mercy of life. Here's a little girl with a lot of power and a lot of people who underestimate it'

Joss Whedon

She and Angel are reunited in Las Vegas but she is minus her memory. And how do you explain to an amnesiac that they have been living in a twilight world fighting demons and are in love with a reformed vampire?

Charisma Carpenter, who plays Cordelia, says even though Angel and Cordelia finally get to kiss later in the series, she won't reveal if it's the end of the will-they-won't-they storyline. 'Nothing is ever happily ever after, but sex is so key,' says Carpenter. 'Love creates conflict and there's no drama without conflict.'

As if Angel and Buffy haven't both got enough to worry about there's the return of an old enemy, Faith, the evil slayer. Actress Eliza Dushku is popping up in both series, leading to more speculation about whether there will be the much talked about Buffy-Angel crossover as a grand finale for Sarah Michelle Gellar's reign.

Boreanaz admits he has mixed feelings about the idea. 'If they got back together again it would be an interesting mix of how each has developed. The underlying love would still be there for each other – it was very strong – and so who knows how it would work out.'

Luke chapter three

NEW

He's been the high school kid and the prisoner, now Luke Perry plays the hero

It's Luke Perry as you've never seen him before – dirty, stubbly and trying to save the world.

The pretty boy star of glossy Beverly Hills 90210 has become Jeremiah, the hero fighting for survival in the post-apocalyptic world of a new drama series.

With everyone on Earth over the age of puberty wiped out by a man-made plague, the Big Death, it's up to the kids to grow up and create a new world order. Jeremiah is one of the few left with a conscience.

Fifteen years after the holocaust he teams up with some like-minded survivors to try to create a community and battle power-mad outlaws and marauding weirdos.

Luke, who also stars in prison drama Oz, admits the idea of exploring what happens after a massive disaster was enough to tempt him to another TV role. 'After any kind of catastrophe, and God knows we've seen a lot in the last year, what is most important is what you do afterwards to deal with it.'

But the action adventure side of filming hasn't always been easy to handle. 'On the first day we were filming in Vancouver and they told me to get naked and jump into a river. The water was glacial and so cold,' he says.

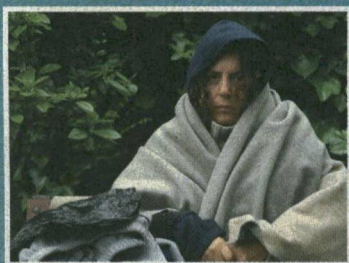

'But as a kid I wanted to get to ride horses, kick in the doors and jump through the windows – I even practised that stuff. Now I actually get to do it and I'm excited about it.'

A new Discovery series aims to examine social attitudes to the marginalised. And the woman chosen to investigate is entrepreneur Anita Roddick. Words: Sally O'Shaughnessy

On the face of it

SHE'S THE FOUNDER of The Body Shop, with an OBE, whose other works include helping the homeless via The Big Issue. Now you can get under Anita Roddick's skin in a new three-part series on Discovery in which she goes undercover and takes on new personae to explore people's reactions. In one she dons a fat suit weighing two stone, in another she is aged, and finally she spends four nights as a homeless person in central London.

'Why am I doing this?' she asks herself as she steps into the fat suit and attempts to go unnoticed in a supermarket or huddles for the night in a doorway in Soho, only to find her sleeping place a toilet for some street cleaners. She answers her own question later. 'I did this because I was curious. I learned during the month we filmed that you can be an object of curiosity, ignored or simply invisible.'

The three hour-long programmes were directed by Vadim Jean, perhaps better known for his work as a cinema director (Leon the Pig Farmer, Clockwork Mice). He was attracted to the project precisely, he says, because it wasn't the usual documentary. 'We thought of George Orwell's classic work from the thirties, Down and Out in Paris and London,' explains Jean, 'and thought it would be interesting to do an update of that. Then the idea opened out from that and we thought: what if Anita tries to get under the skin of a number of people who are treated differently just because of how they appear to be? She's extraordinarily good at getting people to open up. I think most of us are undecided about how we feel about lots of things. Yet television never lets you do that. Anita engages with people in a very human way. This is her personal journey.'

There are times when Roddick is clearly battling with her own preconceptions. She is only too happy, for example, to discard the fat suit and resume her own identity. 'She was ambivalent about the fat subject,' Jean admits. 'She feels comfortable with the aesthetics of it, but can't reconcile the clear evidence of the damage it does to health. What she found most surprising was how physically difficult it was. Why would

Thinking Big

Enigmatic and aloof, the man with no name – Sex and the City's 'Big' – divided women everywhere. Vicki Power meets Big actor Chris Noth to find out what's next for him somebody choose to do that? In a funny way the programme challenges her views about women being themselves, which of course The Body Shop has always been strong about.'

More compelling is the episode in which she lives and sleeps as a homeless person in central London for four nights, and it's an issue to which she has genuinely contributed. Her husband, Gordon, co-founded The Big Issue in 1991 using the couple's Body Shop capital. Modelled on an American street paper, they set out to provide work for the homeless by making them vendors of the newspaper and providing them with pitches.

'It's an issue she feels very strongly about,' Jean says. 'For five days and four nights, she was out on the street – that was it. She couldn't dip in and out.'

But while some of the filming was covert, Roddick was lucky enough to have a cameraman keeping watch over her. 'She felt uncomfortable with lots of it,' Jean admits. 'She hated begging. She didn't like the idea of somebody with lots of money doing that.'

At one point she was challenged by some homeless people (who refused to be filmed) who demanded, 'Why are you doing this?'. 'That was the only time that any of the homeless people had any problem with it,' says Jean. 'I think that's because everyone knows what she's doing with The Big Issue. Quite rightly homeless people have been stitched up so many times by documentary makers who are out to prove their point, they often feel that they're being exploited in some way.'

But where some documentary makers have simply vanished after filming, Roddick has remained in touch with the people she met. She's become personally involved with Sam, for example, the pregnant Big Issue vendor who takes her onto the streets with her partner Tom. 'They are now in permanent accommodation and had a baby boy,' says Jean. 'Anita wouldn't want me to tell you this, but she emptied the contents of her house in London because she's selling it and gave them all her furniture.'

In all three programmes, Roddick is endearingly frank and often hilarious. As she looks at herself in the mirror complete with 80-year-old make-up, she muses, 'Every man should have this as a birthday present from his wife and then she should say, "Now prove to me you really love me."' Jean agrees: 'I think that was the one that affected Anita the most. She's about to hit 60. She'll never be homeless, she'll never be fat, but she's about to enter the third age. She's facing up to those issues herself.'

CHRIS NOTH is exasperated. He even looks a little hurt. As the actor who plays Sex and the City's Mr Big – a man so remote he doesn't even have a name – Noth (which rhymes with 'both', not 'moth') simply can't understand why his character is considered TV's Big-est cad for not marrying Carrie Bradshaw, the sex columnist played by Sarah Jessica Parker.

Noth, a confirmed bachelor himself, is happy to be Big's apologist. 'It's so pejorative, the word commitment-phobe,' says Noth, 48, while digging into lunch at London's trendy Met Bar. 'He's just not going to go somewhere like marriage if it doesn't work for his life, and I think that's what makes women get pissed off with him. But he goes as far as he can go.'

But that won't be far at all, since Big only appears in one episode of the saucy sitcom's fifth series, scheduled for E4 early next year. 'He and Carrie can't keep getting back together all the time and then breaking up. It wouldn't work. They can't be together, but they still mean a lot to each other.' Brace yourselves, ladies, Noth doesn't anticipate Big screen-time in the sixth series, either! 'It just depends on my schedule and whether the plot is organic enough to merit an appearance.'

'Organic' is one of those words (along with plenty of four-letter ones) that peppers Noth's conversation, especially when he talks about relationships. Noth is interested in women he can respond to 'organically'. Marriage would also have to happen 'organically'; ditto having kids. Translation: it would take a miracle to get Noth up the aisle.

The fact that Noth's career hasn't followed a traditional star arc shows a refreshing disregard for what constitutes 'success'. He doesn't like doing series TV, and complained of boredom during his five-year stint on Law & Order, which ended in 1995.

'I don't like being in everybody's living rooms all the time,' Noth says.

'What really worries me is that as you get older you start to dry up a little. I can't play Hamlet anymore and that bothers me. I want to keep being open to things and not shutting down. I still have some mountains I want to climb. I don't want to just look at them.' So speaks a man with Big plans.

Big business: in Sex and the City, Big enjoyed the dating game with Carrie

Film

Thanks to its satirical script, the brilliantly animated fairy tale Shrek appeals to adults as well as kids. Garth Pearce speaks to members of the film's starry voice cast

Swamp fever

A GROUND-BREAKING ANIMATION about a jolly green ogre, DreamWorks' Shrek was one of last year's top box-office hits. Hilarious and wholly original, it stars the voice talents of Mike Myers, Cameron Diaz and Eddie Murphy. But scratch just beneath the surface of this colourful, fun-filled fairy tale and you will find a witty, sharply satirical spoof.

In its efforts to gain superiority in the field, DreamWorks spent millions and made many thinly disguised jabs at its main opponent, Disney.

The film is based on a children's book by award-winning author William Steig. Shrek (Myers) is a swamp-dwelling ogre who is horrified when all the unwanted fairy-tale characters from the Kingdom of Duloc are dumped on his doorstep by Lord Farquaad (John Lithgow). 'I am amazed and hugely entertained at what they have got away with,' says Lithgow, whose cartoon face even shows a likeness to Disney's chief executive officer, Michael Eisner. 'Yet, after 19 years in Hollywood, nothing surprises me any more.'

The fairy-tale cast includes some of Disney's most sacred characters (including Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs, Pinocchio and Three Little Pigs).

Shrek, clearly not amused, enlists the help of a talking donkey (Murphy) and arrives to negotiate with Farquaad, whose abode bears remarkable similarities to Walt Disney World's Cinderella's Castle.

Farquaad does a deal. He will rid Shrek of all his unwanted guests if the ogre can rescue the woman he wishes to be his bride, the beautiful Princess Fiona (Diaz). Not an easy task considering she's imprisoned in a tower guarded by a dragon, and his mission is almost wrecked by another Disney favourite, Monsieur (Robin) Hood and a collection of singing, dancing Merry Men.

'We basically took every fairy tale and turned it on its side,' says Shrek producer Aron Warner. 'Nothing is sacred and every fairy tale gets roasted. These characters are ripe for parody.'

The seriousness of DreamWorks' intentions to be a world-beater with Shrek came when Myers, having completed his voice recordings, suddenly declared he didn't like the results of his efforts.

A little over $4m of a reputed $60m budget was poured into re-voicing. Myers delivers in an accent that sounds like a cross between the obese Scottish villain he played in the comedy Austin Powers: The Spy Who Shagged Me and Sean Connery on an off day.

'I was amazed at the commitment,' admits Myers. 'They had to throw out all my animation, too, because you are filmed when reading

PREMIERE

Sky Movies
Premier, Saturday
14th, 8.00pm

and each scene of your character is matched to how you pronounce the words. The producer, Jeffrey Katzenberg, told me this had never been done before in the history of animation – and I believed him.’

Myers’ real voice is a curious mixture of Canadian, where he was born, the Liverpool accent of his parents, and both London and America’s west coast, where he’s worked.

‘I realised Shrek needed to sound a mixture of vulnerable, hurt, angry and dismissive,’ he says. ‘A Scottish accent, somehow, captured all that. Why couldn’t I get it right first time? I can’t really give an answer, but questions were never really asked.’

There were problems of a different kind with Diaz. The animators, with improved technology, were able to give an almost human look to all their characters. In Princess Fiona’s case, she looked too much like Diaz. Supervising animator Raman Hui says, ‘We can get such excellent facial and body movements, applying layers of bone, muscle, fat, skin, hair and clothing, that the characters can look human. Shrek is above anything that has been achieved in computer animation, but Princess Fiona was a step too far. This film is about animation and fantasy – not the real thing.’

Diaz, 29, was unnerved by such on-screen cloning. ‘It was like looking in the mirror,’ she says. ‘I thought to myself: “If this is the future, then perhaps they don’t need actors.”’ The actress fitted in her voice recordings for Shrek between filming for a succession of movies, including Charlie’s Angels.

‘I would sometimes be training for kick boxing in Charlie’s Angels and turn up to record in my kit,’ she says. ‘I looked as far removed from a fairy-tale princess as it’s possible to be.’

The star actors hardly met during the five years of filming. ‘It was the oddest experience,’ says Lithgow, twice an Oscar nominee for roles in The World According to Garp and Terms of Endearment.

‘I once worked with Mike, but have never met Eddie Murphy in my life and only met Cameron in a hamburger shop by chance. I would stand in a studio, with an actor to read the other lines, feeling like one of those quiz-show contestants who go into a soundproof booth.’

‘After all these years my biggest box-office success by a mile came with a movie in which no one sees me.’

The Mummy Returns

Sky Premier, Christmas Day, 8.00pm
Not for director Stephen Sommers the slow-burning suspense, atmospheric lighting and melancholy romance of Universal’s classic 1932 version of The Mummy. Instead, in his 1999 resuscitation of the tale, Sommers opted for slam-bang action, impressive effects and goofy humour. It proved a successful formula and there’s more of the same in this sequel (sort of The Mummy in London), a spectacular, but unpretentious, Boys’ Own adventure whose antic energy doesn’t allow us time to muse on how familiar it all is. All the leads, including Brendan Fraser and Rachel Weisz, are back.

Captain Corelli’s Mandolin

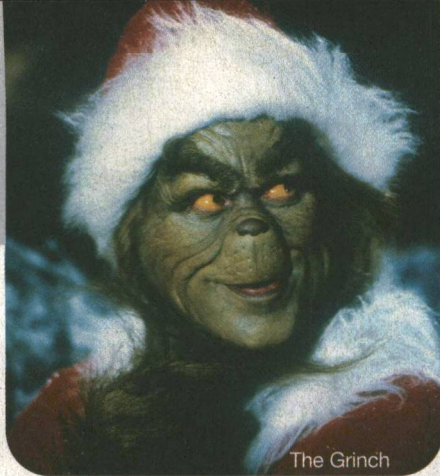

Sky Premier, Christmas Eve, 9.45pm
Many fans of Louis de Bernières’ novel, about a star-crossed affair between a doctor’s daughter on the Greek island of Cephalonia and a music-loving officer in the occupying Italian army, were furious at this adaptation, complaining of eccentric accents and plot inaccuracies. But taken on purely cinematic terms, the film succeeds as a moving, sun-drenched spectacle. Nicolas Cage is the title character, Penelope Cruz the object of his sweet affections.

Fat City

Sky Cinema, Wednesday 4th, 12.10pm, 6.00pm
John Huston’s steadfastly unsentimental celebration of the underdog, which focuses on the sad and seedy side of boxing inhabited by the has-beens and never-will-bes. A sombre desperation is sewn through this tale of two down-at-heel souls; Stacey Keach gives a career-best performance as a boozy, washed-up fighter, while Jeff Bridges is excellent as his young protégé. Huston hits a wide range of truthful emotional notes and demonstrates a commendable compassion for the outcast.

El Mariachi

Sky Cinema, Sunday 8th, 8.00pm
Such was young guerrilla film-maker Robert Rodriguez’s obsessive and inspiring commitment to this project – a no-nonsense action flick intended for the Spanish-language video market – that he participated in medical experiments for much-needed money. In the end, the talented Texan got the whole thing in the can for an astounding £7000 – and put all the bloated beat-’em-ups that cost 100 times as much to shame. Its extreme budgetary restrictions, raw, shot-on-the-run look, and Rodriguez’s resourceful ingenuity, give this movie the sort of innocent, infectious exuberance that made his recent Spy Kids movies so darned enjoyable.

LETTER OF THE MONTH

Chasing Angel

My sister and I are huge fans of the show Angel and we would like to congratulate Sky One for showing such a remarkable series. I do have some queries, however, that I hope you can help me with. Firstly, do you know when series four will be on Sky One? Series one of Angel (starring David Boreanaz, right) was being shown in the early hours of the morning but was replaced by Highlander. Does Sky One have any plans to show the remaining episodes and, if so, could it possibly be shown earlier in the evening? Also, would it be possible to have a repeat viewing of season three? It would be great if you could put it on at 6.00pm weekdays, like you did with Buffy the Vampire Slayer.

Finally, I would like to thank you for the wonderful magazine that keeps me up to date on all my favourite shows.

Tarita Trye, email

Well done, Tarita, you've won £50 for writing this month's prize letter! Sky One responds: 'Thank you for your letter, Sky One is glad to hear you are such fans of the show. Series four of Angel will be on Sky One from January 2003. Unfortunately, due to the stronger content of Angel, it is very unlikely that we will be able to transmit it at 6.00pm, although we are considering repeating earlier series in the new year.'

Concert, filmed in America to celebrate Independence Day. We haven't shown Garth Brooks Behind the Music for three years, and we do not have any programmes on Gareth Gates. Yes, we do play programmes on Madonna, Eminem, George Michael, Jennifer Lopez, Elton John and David Bowie and, yes, we do repeat our highly acclaimed 100 Greatest series; audience research and ratings show these artists and programmes to be popular.'

SMALL IS BEAUTIFUL

I am a huge fan of Smallville (whose cast is pictured, above right) and I was really upset when the last series ended. So I want to know, how long do I have to wait for the new series to come to E4?

Carly, email

Not long, Carly! The new series of Smallville is back on Channel 4 and E4 in January. But if you can't wait or have missed out on any of the first series, E4 is repeating series one from Monday 2nd December, weeknights at 6.00pm.

WEE SMALL HOURS TOO EARLY FOR THE PRETENDER

I think The Pretender is one of the best shows on telly. I started to watch it when it first came to the UK a few years ago, and when the first season finished we were told it would soon return, but to my knowledge it did not. Then I noticed it was back on at the awful time of 5.00am. I was wondering if Sky One is going to change it to a more reasonable time so other viewers could see this fabulous show.

Kevin Rawcliffe, email

Sorry, Kevin, Sky One tells us that there are currently no plans to show The Pretender at a different time.

ENGLAND, MY ENGLAND

As an ardent cricket fan, I'm very excited at the prospect of this year's Ashes tour of Australia. The Sky Sports cricket coverage is usually second-to-none and I can't wait to see England thrash the Aussies. Yes, I know that may sound unlikely, but I'm sure I'm not the only cricket fan in the country who thinks we have a really good chance this year. It is fashionable in the media to say that England will crash to the Baggy Greens, and that's why I was so pleased to read Gareth Hargreaves' article, Put to the Test, in November's issue. I thought his assessment of the forthcoming tour was really interesting and I felt proud that he gave our players their due.

Helen Bush, email

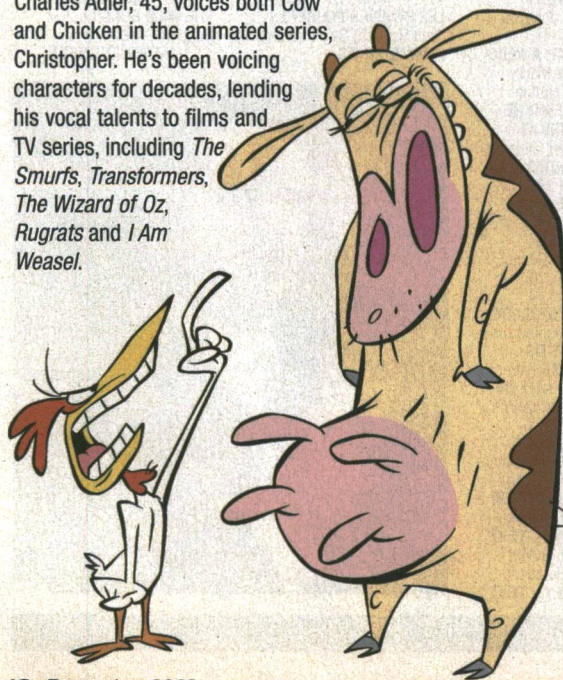

MOOSIC TO MY EARS

I am 17 and have grown up with the cartoon Cow & Chicken on Cartoon Network since the age of 12 or 13. I've always wondered who is the voice of Cow and can you tell me if they have ever done any other voice work?

Christopher Anderson, Tyne & Wear

Charles Adler, 45, voices both Cow and Chicken in the animated series. Christopher. He's been voicing characters for decades, lending his vocal talents to films and TV series, including The Smurfs, Transformers, The Wizard of Oz, Rugrats and I Am Weasel.

Udder attack: the stars of Cartoon Network's hit animation series Cow & Chicken are voiced by Charles Adler

BRUCEY BONUS, PLEASE

Why does VH1 constantly repeat programmes about Michael Jackson, Madonna, George Michael, Celine Dion, Christina Aguilera, Spice Girls, Britney Spears, Eminem, Gareth Gates, manufactured 'bands', 'reality' shows and endless 100 best of...? Sometimes they are on two or three times a day. Most of the above get whole days or weekends devoted to them. Bruce Springsteen (pictured, below) didn't even get a mention in your mag, much less a whole day! And there's no sign of any of the programmes being repeated – or are they, and you're just not telling us? I believe that there is a Metallica Behind the Music, when will that be shown? How many times has Garth Brooks Behind the Music been shown?

Sandi Stephenson, email

VH1 responds: 'VH1 showed a Bruce Springsteen night on 16 October, where we exclusively showed the first leg of his new 'The Rising' European Tour, live from Barcelona, and an hour-long documentary on the Boss from our Legend series, plus his greatest hits. On 4 July we also showed Bruce Springsteen: Homecoming

A DATE WITH IMPROVEMENT

I've been watching the new series of Blind Date, and the behind-the-scenes stuff on ITV2, and I reckon the new style is an improvement. I know some people are complaining because they got rid of Graham and they've added all these other elements to the show, but if anything it seems to liven it all up. Never mind the old saying, 'If it ain't broke, don't fix it' – the old format had been around for so long, it was about time some changes were made. And as much as we all loved Graham's 'reminders', the show doesn't lack anything without them. The first episode of the new series with Blue was fantastic – that lucky girl going on a date to Barcelona with Duncan! Good on Cilla, too, she's such a great host – something Blind Date could not survive without.

MONTH

The Emperor's
New Groove
Disney Channel,
Sunday 8th, 4.00pm

A South American yarn, The Emperor's New Groove is the tale of an arrogant jungle king who is turned into a llama and must change his ways in order to regain his former body.

With an obnoxious lead character, The Emperor's New Groove is not your standard Disney production. It also began life as an entirely different concept, but despite such inauspicious factors it's been a worldwide hit.

A stellar voice cast from the likes of satirical comedian David Spade and John Goodman to Eartha Kitt undoubtedly helped. And it also boasts a stunning musical line-up with two specially written songs from Sting, one of which, Perfect World, is performed by crowd-pleaser Tom Jones.

MUSIC

The One &
Only Enrique
Sky One,
Tuesday 31st,
8.00pm

Join a select audience of 600 diehard fans as they enjoy a performance by Enrique Iglesias as well as behind-the-scenes footage from his adopted home in Miami in this One & Only special.

Hearthrob must be stamped into the Iglesias family genes. Enrique, son of globally adored crooner Julio, is now one of the best-selling Latin recording artists in the world, his smouldering Latino pop causing hearts to flutter from Venice to Venice Beach. Just to confirm his phwoar factor he's currently dating tennis star Anna Kournikova.

Brought up in Madrid by his mother, Enrique later went to live with his father in Miami and it was there he was exposed to the hybrid of Hispanic, European and American music that is stamped into his musical style.

Since then he's gone on to sell more than 23 million albums worldwide and has toured with the likes of Elton John and Billy Joel, as well as dueting with Whitney Houston. Here you can enjoy some of his greatest hits.

Making of a Hangover
Discovery,
Sunday 8th,
9.00pm

As the season of goodwill and alcohol excess looms, here's a new documentary revealing the science behind hangover symptoms and the effects of alcohol on the body.

Seven volunteers from Chicago agree to have their blood alcohol level monitored as they spend an evening in a bar to find out how alcohol affects people in different ways. As the evening wears on and more alcohol is consumed, the light drinkers become more talkative and uninhibited. The heavier drinkers, however, experience dramatically impaired reaction times, hand-eye coordination and motor skills. One woman is barred by the end of the evening after 17 drinks.

Groundbreaking scientific research into the effects of alcohol on our behaviour and bodies is revealed. Cutting-edge computer graphics explain what happens in our liver, heart, stomach and brain when we drink. After watching this, that glass of Christmas cheer might not look quite so inviting.

Blaine has proved adept at handling the public but that hasn't stopped him tackling some of the most extraordinary stunts. For the Vertigo stunt, performed earlier this year, he spent two days at the top of a 90ft pillar balancing on a tiny platform.

VH1, Thursday

It may be 20 years since the Irish rockers first launched their anthemic rock but they're still going down well with new audiences as this concert from their Elevation tour proves.

Having veered away from their rock 'n' roll roots the band returned to their trademark guitar-led rock with All That You Can't Leave Behind, released in 2000. Judging by the packed audiences on the Elevation tour, it was a judicious move.

Anfield EXPECTS

This month's fixtures provide a tough test for Liverpool, but Danny Murphy remains confident the Merseysiders can go all the way and win the title. Interview: Luke Nicoli

IT'S BEEN 12 LONG years since Liverpool last lifted the championship trophy, a lifetime in footballing terms and a painful sentence for a club whose dominance had previously extended itself over two decades.

The halcyon years of Keegan, Dalglish, Rush and Barnes are now consigned to history and it is the new order under Gerard Houllier (below) that represents the best chance of returning to those glory days. Recent cup success has been an indication of the progress made, but it is the Premiership trophy by which the Frenchman will be ultimately judged and this season would appear his best chance of grasping the illusive crown.

Having reached the halfway mark, the usual suspects are vying for top spot as they plot the kick for home. Arsenal and Manchester United maintain an ominous presence but it is the consistency of Houllier's side that has been the yardstick for the campaign thus far.

Yet this month will be the truest test yet of the club's credentials; the visit of United on 1 December precedes a trip to Highbury at the end of the month, while a derby clash against Everton and a difficult trip to Sunderland also stand out in a congested festive list. Inevitably, the games against their title rivals capture the imagination and according to midfielder Danny Murphy, the outcome could decide the title's destiny.

'This title race is proving so close that the games between the top teams could decide it,' says the England midfielder. 'Last season went right to the wire and with the same thing likely to happen again, we've got to capitalise if our opponents slip up. Our main objective this season is to win the Premiership and we remain on course.'

A creditable 80-point tally would usually be enough to take the title, yet it was the Gunners who completed the league and cup double last season.

There has been much talk that Arsène Wenger's side remain a class apart from their Mersey rivals, yet Murphy is desperate to prove that the difference is just media hype. 'You've got to admire Arsenal's power, pace and ability, but they are only human like us – they can't be fantastic every week,' he adds.

'They've had players coming back from injury and that can disrupt things. Last season we got stuck for being orthodox in our play and although we've been more attacking this time, we still have our critics. But this is the best we've played since I've been at the club and you can't argue with our position.'

Murphy is also looking forward to renewing acquaintances with United, having scored the only goal in the game at Old Trafford last season. Having been booed off by his own fans a week earlier against Southampton, the performance proved to be a watershed and he is hoping for a similar display this time.

'It's always lovely to beat them, but to score the winner with five minutes left meant so much to me,' he recalls. 'It erased the memories of being booed, which was a horrible experience. Thankfully I haven't looked back since that day.'

England recognition soon followed and although he missed out on the World Cup through injury, Murphy has become an integral figure in Houllier's Premiership assault this season. In an era of player rotation and enlarged squads, his continued success is no mean feat.

'The fact that I was devastated to miss out on the World Cup shows how far I've come,' says the 25-year-old. 'It wasn't long ago that I was looking at a career in the First or Second Divisions and I always remember that. But I've proved myself here and that has been important. All that is missing now is a title medal but with the players we've got and have added this summer, we have a great chance.'

SNOW BUSINESS

British competitors will be hoping to star in the upcoming winter sports season. Interviews: Gabriel Fleming

AFTER THE HYPE OF the Winter Olympics in Salt Lake City, the upcoming winter sports season is a step back to reality for the athletes who brave the thrills, spills and freezing cold temperatures of the world's finest pistes in search of glory.

One man with a serious point to prove will be Alain 'the Highlander' Baxter, the alpine skier who looked to have written himself into the history books with a bronze medal at the Olympics – the highest ever placing for a Brit. However, disaster struck when Baxter failed a drugs test and was promptly stripped of his medal.

Despite an appeal ruling absolving him of any deliberate wrong-doing, the medal was not returned and Baxter was left with a bitter taste in his mouth. So the upcoming World Cup represents a perfect opportunity to put it all behind him: 'At the moment I don't really care much for the Olympics; the World Cup is the main goal,' he said. 'I just want to get back into the action again and win my way back onto the podium.'

Another British skier hoping to right a few wrongs is Surrey's Chemmy Alcott, one of a select few women who competes at the highest level in all four disciplines of downhill skiing. 'I don't like to set targets,' she says. 'I just want to do as well as I can and fulfil my potential.'

If I can do that I'll be happy and I know I'll do well.'

She will have to set her sights very high indeed if she is to come near the formidable Croat Janica Kostelic, who won three gold medals in Salt Lake City.

Moving from the high speeds of downhill skiing to the intricate skills of cross-country skiing and shooting, it will also be an interesting year for the British Biathlon team of Mark Gee, Jason Sklenar and Marc Walker. They must come to terms with the retirement of inspirational captain Michael Dixon, who leaves a gap that will be hard to fill: 'It will be weird not having him around,' says Gee. 'Not just because of his performances, but because he was the guy that held the team together. He'll be greatly missed but I am sure that we can record a good result on the day.'

Other events for British winter sports fans to look forward to include world cups in bobsleigh and skeleton. In the bobsleigh the four-man teams will be looking to build on great results of 11th and 14th for the first and second teams at the Olympics. In the skeleton, Alex Coomber will need no introduction when she defends her third consecutive world title, buoyed by a bronze medal at the Olympics.

DANNY MILLS

With Leeds still struggling to find consistent form, Mills realises the fixture-congested festive programme could make or break his team's season

AS WE APPROACH the halfway stage in the season, inconsistencies continue to plague our progression and with games coming thick and fast during the festive period, it is likely to be a month that will either make or break our target of a top four finish and Champions League qualification.

October was a particularly sombre month and highlighted our current problems; without a league win and the hammer blow of another home defeat at the hands of Liverpool, we then showed our true colours at Middlesbrough in a tempestuous 2-2 draw. The dismissal of Alan Smith only served to inspire the lads and although we failed to take all three points, we worked hard and played well against a team that has been widely regarded as the surprise package of the season under Steve McClaren.

I felt for Smithy after the game and, as the TV pictures proved, he was dismissed for a fairly innocuous challenge. Even Gareth Southgate, who was on the receiving end, stood up in Alan's defence, but it appears that his reputation goes before him. Having found myself in a similar predicament last season I can empathise, and the only way for Alan to overcome the adversity is by staying focused and continuing to perform on the pitch.

The result cemented our mid-table status and I've lost count of the number of fans who have asked me what's going wrong. Fundamentally, we have the squad and management team in place but when you find yourself in a run of inconsistent results, it's sometimes hard to break the cycle. That's why December is so important; with a home game against Southampton sandwiched between trips to Bolton and Sunderland, we have the ideal opportunity to make an impression on the league table. The impending return of Robbie Fowler and Michael Bridges could also prove pivotal in our season – its buoyed the lads, while increasing competition as we move into the new year.

As I look back on 2002, it has certainly been a watershed for me. The dismissals and ensuing suspension at the start of the year served as a wake-up call and inspired me to remain disciplined and focused on the pitch.

I would like to think that the World Cup highlighted my transformation, therefore it was another blow to find myself relegated to the subs' bench for England's recent European qualifiers against Slovakia and Macedonia.

With an enhanced reputation, I had hoped to be pencilled in for the Bratislava opener at the very least and I'm sure any sportsman performing at the highest level would possess that same self-belief. It was not to be and I respect Mr Eriksson's decision; Gary Neville is vastly experienced and has proved down the years to be a consistent performer. Having said that, I would have loved the opportunity to prove that my experiences in Korea/Japan have greatly improved my credentials.

Talking of consistency, few players have matched the level achieved by David Seaman, so it was galling to read the level of criticism aimed in his direction following the disappointing draw against Macedonia at St Mary's. Some people have very short memories; is this not the same goalkeeper who saved us against Sweden and Argentina in the recent past or, indeed, on that momentous night against Germany in Munich?

Only he can decide where his international path takes him. However, events in Southampton served a question that continues to raise debate: who will be the eventual successor? We are fortunate to have a number of excellent young keepers, while David James also deserves his chance, but I'd have to lean towards my Leeds team-mate Paul Robinson as the long-term successor. He possesses the physical presence, concentration and ability to fulfil the role, likewise the hunger, having lived in the shadows of Nigel Martyn for so long.

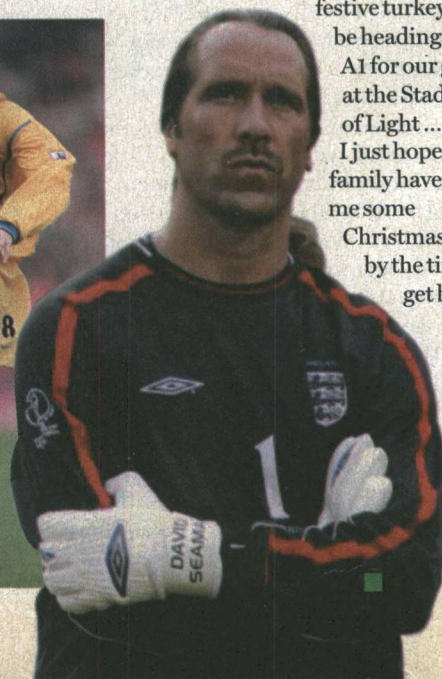

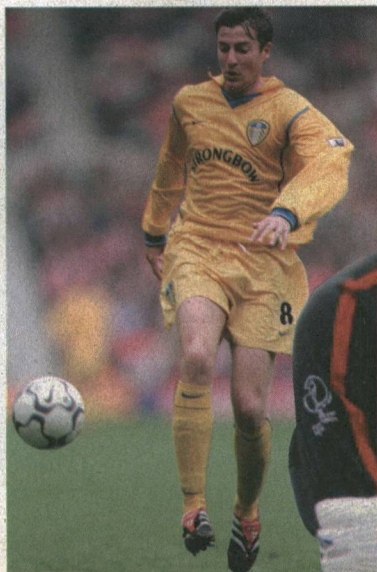

For both of us, domestic success is imperative if we are to fulfil our international ambitions, and that's why it's so important that we see an improvement in results. We also owe it to the fans, who have stuck with us so loyally through this difficult period, to improve and try our best to win some silverware. It's already 11 years since we last picked up a trophy and that's far too long for a club of our stature.

Finally, may I take this opportunity to wish you all a happy Christmas and a peaceful New Year. Oh, and spare a thought for me as you tuck into your festive turkey – I'll be heading up the A1 for our game at the Stadium of Light... and I just hope the family have left me some Christmas pud by the time I get back!
